I have a table that has dynamically created rows. In each table cell is a "download" link. I want to be able to click on that link and have it append plain text (the contents of that row in the DB) into a (class="text_wrapper") on the page. Would anyone know how to do this? I'm very new to jQuery. A: If you are using.click() to handle the click event, then you can use.html() to get the value of the cell and place it into the parent element. Note that the trick here is to use.html() with the value of the cell and not the element itself, otherwise you will get a "cannot set property html of null" error. $("your div").html($("#your td").html()) A: Try $("yourdiv").load("download/"+data.id //data is your value fetched from database); you can also use jQuery html() like that $("#yourdiv").html(data); A: You can also use $("#targetDiv").text(myText); or $("#targetDiv").html(
